Chaffey enrollment expected to drop in '81-82, then rise

By JIM MARXEN Staff Writer

A slight downturn followed by an increase in the number of Chaffey Joint Union High School District students can be anticipated over the next five years, according to an annual report published by the district.

Trustees were given a copy of the enrollment projections during their board meeting Monday night but no actions were taken

Decisions on staffing requirements, space needs and capital and operating expenditures will be based on the figures which reflect student populations in surrounding elementary school districts.

The survey was conducted this year after students had been to school one month. Projections in the report are based on past experience with each school's growth and all projections are revised annually.

Student population should drop slightly next year from its current level of 12,799, according to the survey. That figure should rise to 13,266 students in 1984-85 and to 13,503 in

As anticipated, the survey shows a steadily increasing student population at Alta Loma High School. Located in one of the state's fastestgrowing areas, the school has already passed the overcrowded stage and students there are being sent to other schools

The estimates show the school's population growing from 2,795 this year to 2,978 in 1984-85. A decrease of 31 students was projected the following year

Projections for Chaffey High show student populations increasing from 3,339 this year to 3,607 in 1985-86 with a 200-student decrease in

Montclair High School's student population should remain nearly the same over the next five years, according to the survey. Currently the school houses approximately 1,837

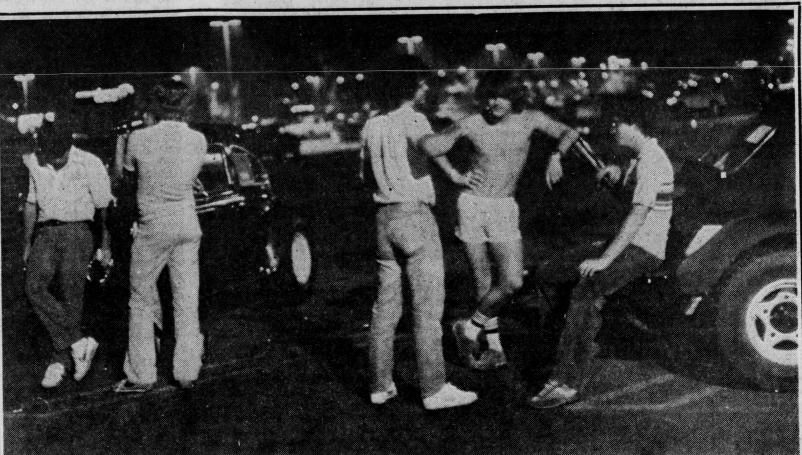

Ontario High School's population is anticipated to grow from 1,435 this year to 2,136 in 1985-86, while at Upland High, enrollment should drop approximately 350 from its current level of 2,613 students during the same period.

The district's three special schools should see their student populations decrease slightly from 780 in 1980-81 to 725 in 1985-86

District business manager Russ Dickinson said in a letter to the board that the figures are valid for a limited period of time and that projections for the special high schools are estimates agreed upon by the district business office and the school administrators.

For informational purposes, the board was presented with figures that do not include adjustments based on past population trends. Those figures are based on the current populations in local elementary schools and do not provide for students leaving schools.

Those projections are calculated for the next 10 years and show student populations growing during the middle of the decade and decreasing in the final three years.

Youths at Upland's Mountaingreen Center will find it harder now to hang out" because of a state code allowing police to cite traffic offenders at shopping centers. Teen-agers — and others — may be cited for speed, reckless driving and other infractions in parking lots.

To cite violators in Upland parking lots

Authority of police expanded

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

Upland police officers will soon be able to ticket traffic violations committed in the parking lots of seven city shopping centers.

The move, part of the city's effort to reduce problems created by youths "hanging out" at the centers, was approved unanimously by the City Council Monday

Cities are given the authority to draw up resolutions governing police patrol of privately owned and maintained off-street parking areas through Section 21107.8 of the state vehicle code. Violations which may be cited include improper use of handicapped parking zones, infractions of the basic speed law, reckless driving, speed contests and exhibits of speed, and laws governing the use of offroad vehicles.

The laws may be enforced immediately following the posting of signs in the parking lots informing motorists of the legislation. Shopping center owners and management are responsible for erecting Centers which may be patrolled must be specifically listed in the resolution, although City Manager Lee Travers told the council it is always possible to add more private establishments as needed through amendments.

The seven shopping areas approved Monday include: Mountaingreen Center, Upland Northwest Shopping Center, Mountain Plaza, New Orleans Square, The Courtyard, Upland Square and the Uptown and Country Center.

Work on implementing the code section began with a memo from police Capt. Gary Hart to the city manager in August, and was followed by a second memo and requests from citizens who live in areas bordering the Mountaingreen Center on Mountain Avenue, north of Seventh Street.

One resident, Dale Walker of Linda Way, told the council the city 'cannot afford' a reputation of being the place for youth to come for

Reports from over the summer indicated teen-agers from as far away as San Diego were congregating in the center's parking lot to drink, drag race and socialize.

Shop owners said the late night crowds scared away much of their business, and posed a security hazard. Police crack-downs on violations ranging from curfew violations to loitering and possession of alcohol by a minor have resulted in well over 300 arrests since

But it is the noise of squealing tires, loud stereos and revving engines that still plague neighboring residents, and that the new resolution should help prevent.

Representatives of the seven shopping centers met with city staff, and requested they be included with sites where the police will be authorized to patrol.

Ontario has passed a similar resolution. Upland Police Chief Coy Estes said the action will aid the department in controlling vouth congregations at the shopping centers.

'Prior to this resolution, we had very limited authority as far a vehicle code violations on private property," he said. "We needed this sort of action to address the problems at the parking lot.'

He added that Mountaingreen management has hired two off-duty police officers to patrol the area through the holiday season, to help cut down on youth activity.

'The problem in that area has improved drastically," said Estes. "This can only make it better."

'Quiet dinner' holds surprise for Bill Smith

After 30 years of service to the city of Upland, Bill Smith may have thought he had attended his last city function.

He wasn't counting on a surprise retirement party. Nearly 120 people awaited his arrival Nov. 24 in a darkened room at Griswold's in Claremont, where Smith thought he was going out for a pleasant dinner with friends. When he entered the room, lights flashed on and the business license officer was treated to a standing ovation by friends and relatives.

Although Smith's retirement isn't effective until March 1, the Monday evening party honored his 30 years of fulltime work with the city, and another six years as a reserve police

Upland Mayor John McCarthy told the group how he first met Smith in 1944, when they both signed up with the reserves. He added that Smith's brother was a 20-year veteran with the reserves, and his nephew and older brother were also associated with the police depart-

At the time, McCarthy said solemnly, he reasoned being related to a Smith was a prerequisite for entering the department.

The mayor then presented the guest of honor with a resolution on behalf of the City Council honoring Smith for his years of service.

Dr. Fred Gattas of Upland has been named president of the California Society of Internal

The 2,000-member organization is made up of a number of small local internal medicine societies.

'It is a social, economic and professional organization concerned with all activities involving internal medicine," Gattas said. "Its goals are to upgrade the profession and maintain high standards for the practice of internal medicine."

It also represents internists in the larger California Medical Association.

The group opposes legislative measures that might tend to cause deterioration in medical practice. It serves as the voice of internists across the state, he said.

The organization is continually involved with the state Department of Health and its "restrictive rules and regulations," Gattas said, adding, "The health department has made the cost of medical services more burdensome with all its rules. As an example, Gattas said that as of Nov. 1 the state took over phenylketonuria (PKU) testing. He explained that PKU is a genetic defect that, if detected early, can be corrected. If left undetected, severe retardation can result.

Previously, the test could be given at a cost of $7, Gattas said. "The state now requires that those tests be conducted in designated labs. The cost is now about $30."

Besides keeping an eye on legislation related to the medical profession, the organization has an active medical service committee that meets with representatives of large insurance carriers as well as representatives of the Department of Health. The committee acts as an ongoing liason on the problems of medical delivery and cost.

Gattas has served as president of the San Bernardino County Medical Society and is a past president of the medical staff at San Antonio Community Hospital, where he is currently on the executive

A graduate of the University of Illinois, Gattas has been in practice in Upland since 1955. He lives in Upland with his wife, Mary. They have three daughters and one son, aged 19 to 24 years.

Boys' Club site to be rented out, not sold away

By DINAH ROSE Staff Writer

Plans to sell the Upland site of the West End Boys' Club have been set aside in favor of renting the building for six months and reopening in June. The decision, made by the board of directors Monday, followed what supporters called a "disappointing turnout" of parents at the meeting. A group of about 20 parents asked the board in a special session Thursday for one last chance to raise the estimated $6,000 to keep the clubhouse open through December After a weekend spent trying to increase community interest in the project, they were unable to raise the necessary money.

"I think this is representative," said board President Jim Hampton as he looked at the crowd of about a dozen adults at Monday's meeting "We have more board members present tonight than parents. This has been the problem all along.

The board announced decisions last week to close the club's two facilities due to lack of funds. The Ontario site was closed permanently Nov. 14, and the Upland clubhouse shut down Nov. 21. West End United Way representatives said the club's $54,000 annual funding raise funds for the club, and the executive director serves as the administrator in charge of staff, programming and budget.

"I don't think the difficulty here is a board problem or an executive director problem," he said. "It is a community problem If the community had supported the club when it needed their help, it would still be going." He added that the planned changes should "put some new life in the organization

Seaver House to be toured

The historic Seaver House on the Pomona College campus, Claremont, will be open Dec. 5, 6 and 7 from 3 to 8 p.m. for the public to tour under the sponsorship of the Rembrandt Club.

"Turn of the Century" will be the theme as guests are taken over the Victorian mansion moved from Pomona to its present site in September 1979. It now is used as a reception center and as the Alumni

Center for Pomona College. Carolers will be on hand to sing, and a boutique and bake sale are planned. Proceeds will support the Pomona College art department and Montgomery Galleries

The white, imposing structure is located on the corner of Bonita and College avenues. Tickets may be purchased at the door, but large groups should contact Mrs. Wesley Tilden at 626-3168 one day in advance of the tour time.

Board members of the Rembrandt Club are decorating the house in Victorian style. This former home of the Seaver family is considered "a graceful example of late 19th century classic revival architecture.'

It was built around 1900, though no definite date has been established. Carlton and Estella Seaver raised six children in the home, and all of them, Georgia, Frank Roger, Byron Dick, Homer Calton, Marguerite and Nila, graduated from Pomona

Marguerite, the only surviving member of the family, remembers her home as being a frequent gathering place for student friends who came to dine, talk and even sleep there. She recalls on Christmas Eve, a candle was put in every window, and there are many

Nila Seaver was the last resident in the home, and when she died in 1978, through her will and the generosity of other family members, the Seaver house was given to Pomona College.

After being moved and renovated, the Seaver house was dedicated this past April.

Tour committee members include the Mmes. David Alexander, Michael J. Breheny, Walton Clarke, John B. Coleman, Kenneth Cooke, Robert C. Frampton, J. Carle Hujsking, Jack D. Mansfield, Gertrude McIntosh, Henry D. Mitman, Edwin A. Phillips, E. Reid Shannon and Mrs. Tilden. All will be garbed in Victorian costumes. Mrs. Kenneth Friedenbach is design coordinator, and Mrs. Armando Rivera has designed the tickets.

State bond sale limits won't hurt housing aid

By DON GREEN Staff Writer

State limits imposed last week on bond sales by local governments will not hurt the upcoming issue of mortgage revenue bonds by San Bernardino County to aid affordable

'We couldn't have used it all anyway," said Ann Siracusa, the county's community development director.

Siracusa was referring to a reduction in the county's application from $100 million to $38 million by the state Housing Bond Credit Committee on Thursday.

While the county had once hoped the bond issue might go as high as $100 million, forecasts of a decline in conventional mortgage rates next year, pending federal legislation and other factors had already worked to reduce the scope of the county's bond issue.

Siracusa said commitments by developers and lenders to the bond financing now total about $30 million, although she added that the size of the issue could reach $35 million once all the costs are worked

Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., one of the five members of the state committee, said the tax-exempt bonds contribute to inflation by depriving the federal treasury of some $10 billion a year in taxes and expressed concern that sale of too many bonds could hurt the state's credit, making it tougher to sell bonds for other

He led the committee in holding all state and local housing bonds this fiscal year to $1.5 billion, compared to $2.2 billion in 1979-80. Requests by six local governments, including the county, were cut from $270 million to $136 million.

In the county's case, the reduction was a moot point since only $30 million worth of applications were actually submitted.

Through the tax exemption, investors are willing to buy the bonds at less than prevailing rates of return, which in turn allows the mortgages to be financed at below market rates. Siracusa said she is still optimistic that the bonds may sell below the ceiling rate of 12.75 percent established by the county She said conventional mortgage rates change frequently, but have been ranging above 14 and 15 per-Siracusa said the county does not anticipate problems in selling the entire issue. Other local governments that had the size of their issue cut to about $20 million will face difficulties covering costs associated with the sales, she added. Because of projections that conventional interest rates will drop in 1981, developers who applied for the bond financing were those who had projects finished or nearly com-

Siracusa said the mortgage revenue bonds will assist the buyers of some 400 new houses and condominiums. Lenders taking part in the bond issue will provide several million dollars at the favorable rates to buyers of existing homes and owners making home additions and improvements.

Under the guidelines of the county program, a new residential unit may carry a top sales price of $76,300, Siracusa said.

The family income cutoff for buyers of new units tops $29,000. Siracusa said the figure was reached by calculating what 120 percent of the median family income in the county will be at the end of 1981. Other income guidelines apply to the other loans available under the program.

Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, has been a powerful opponent of the tax-exempt bonds. However, Siracusa said she has been told Ullman, who was defeated this month in his bid for re-election, is apparently to compromise on his legislation, making it less restrictive on future sales, in order to get it passed before Congress adjourns.

Siracusa was hopeful that the county may be able to prepare a second bond issue in spring 1981.

She added that the current issue is planned for sale during the week of Christmas spirit on Mt. Baldy starts early in the month of December as plans are made for the annual holiday home tour.

For the 18th year, the Mt. Baldy Community Club is sponsoring a tour so visitors to the village can see three homes belonging to mountainside residents.

On Friday and Saturday, from 1 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. both days, interested persons will see the homes of Larry and Joan Beck on Bear Canyon Trail, Gordon and Nickie Greene on Dell Avenue and Bill Stead on Mt. Baldy Road on the Canyon Christmas Home Tour.

A tea, boutique and bake sale will be held in conjunction with the tour at the Mt. Baldy School on Mt. Baldy Road located on the right just before entering the

To start the tour, patrons may purchase tickets at the home of Mary Lou Farmer in the village. A large Santa Claus will mark the site on the left side of the street, directly below the Mt. Baldy Village Church.

To reach the Becks' mountain retreat, visitors will walk up Bear Canyon Trail about 200 yards (we suggest sensible shoes for this tour). The cabin is perched on the hillside and is reached by crossing a bridge over the rushing stream.

Three decks invite outdoor summer living. Two are built almost over the stream with one for lounging and one for eating outside. The other looks over the road below. The cabin's main feature is a gigantic stone fireplace which dominates the living room and has a four-foot deep fire area. The two-story cabin is entirely paneled and has wall-towall carpeting. The large master bedroom on the second floor has numerous windows on two sides and a unique bath with large tiled tub designed by Beck. This cabin was originally built in 1909 and used by a spinster school teacher for over 40 years, Beck reports. The Becks consider their cabin "an escape from every for the two days. The living room is tiny, but has a lovely fireplace. Over the mantle is a 1903 painting of a cat done by a relative, Lena H. Abbott. There are three bedrooms with a potbelly stove (unused) in the master bedroom. The other two are occupied by the Greenes' son and daughter and are typical kids' rooms. The long narrow kitchen with its high ceiling is the focal point of this home. The kitchen is stark white with blue accents in the countertop, decorations and china. On the inside wall are hung 12 Norman Rockwell plates, and over the window is a collection of old cooking untensils.

The Greenes' house was originally built around 1900. The third home on the Canyon Christmas tour belongs to Bill Stead, chief of the Mt. Baldy Volunteer Fire

This house was built on the site of the first Mt. Baldy cabin which was put up in 1864 by a miner named Carruthers. Stead said during his construction work, a large tree was cut down from the spot where the front porch now stands. In the big stump was found an old burro shoe, which Stead said was probably tossed by Carruthers around the sapling ... then the sapling grew and imbedded the shoe. It took Stead from 1952 to 1960 to build his house work ing nights and weekends. The paneling is color matched, and the cabinets, doors and trim are all handmade Woods used in the construction were fir, redwood, western cedar, incense cedar, Alaskan pine, Idaho pine and oak for the floors.

The Stead home is furnished with some handsome authentic period furniture, both old and new. He claims the place is "not too fancy, just a comfortable bachelor

Mrs. Jack Pfeiffer is chairman of the event.

Women lawyers offer aid

At the California Women Lawyers second annual board of governors retreat held in San Diego president Marjorie M. Holmes announced that she had written to President-Elect Ronald Reagan to congratulate him on his election and to offer CWL's ongoing cooperation and assistance in reaching his announced goal of seeking out well - qualified women and minorities for judicial and appointive office.

Holmes, in her opening remarks to the governors, pointed out that California Women Lawyers is the only statewide organization of women representing the over 10,000 women attorneys in the State of California, and as such it will continue to expand its legislative and judicial programs to enhance the status of and employment opportunities for professional women in the state as well as the rights of all women. Towards that end, CWL has recently amended its bylaws to expand the board of governors from 15 to 23 members. The new governors consist of representatives of local women's bar associations throughout the state. The purpose of the expanded board is to facilitate networking and effective communications which will result in more effective lobbying efforts on behalf of women. The weekend retreat marked the initial meeting of the expanded board. Audrey A. Perri, president of Inland Counties Women at Law, and Anita Shapiro, District eight governor attended from San Bernardino County.

Perri said, "The 1970's brought increased awareness of serious inequities in our society and with that awareness came positive changes. t is essential that women continue to work together in the next decade not only to solidify our gains but also to continue on the road to full and equal participation at every level of society.'

By Jane Weisman Stem Copley News Service

On a brilliant June afternoon last year, Gov. earthquake standards, and Brown raised his fist and changes in the security and shouted, "No on Diablo evacuation plans have been Canyon!" to 30,000 cheering anti - nuclear protesters in San Luis Obispo.

The governor pledged to do everything in his power to prevent Pacific Gas and Electric Co. (PG and E) from operating its $1.7 billion Diablo Canyon nuclear plant, contending the plant near San Luis Obispo is not designed to withstand a major earthquake.

Brown, in line with that promise, has hired an aggressive Washingtonn D.C. - based attorney to represent the state in the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) licensing proceedings.

PG and E attorneys call the state's counsel, 39 - year old Herbert Brown (no relation to the governor). an obstructionist who behaves in a "very childish

They blame both Browns for causing delays costing PG and E customers about $1 million a day in interest costs and replacement power while the completed plant sits idle.

Herbert Brown, who formerly worked for the Federal Power Commission and the NRC, represents clients involved in energy projects around the world.

His hiring marks the first time in NRC history that a governor was forced to hire outside counsel to represent his state in a nuclear plant licensing proceeding.

The state attorney general usually represents the state, but both former Attorney General Evelle Younger and current Attorney General George Deukmejian refused to support Brown's anti nuclear Deukmejian's office has cut back on its environmental law team and has argued that it is not in the state's interest to attempt to block nuclear power.

So far, Herbert Brown's legal services have cost the governor's office $67,000. His legal strategy focuses on three main arguments:

The Diablo Canyon plant is not built strong enough to withstand the strongest earthquake possible along the Hosgri Fault, lying three miles offshore from the plant.

- PG and E's evacuation plan in case of a nuclear accident is inadequate for protecting the health and safety of the public.

- PG and E's top - secret security plan for the plant is inadequate protection

In its 12th annual rating of corporate performance, the Dun & Bradstreet business monthly reported that Perkin - Elmer's structured planning approach to its five high-technology businesses was responsible for its growth from $20 million in annual sales two decades ago to nearly $1 billion in fiscal 1980.

Dun's reported that another key strength of the company is that among its 15,000 employees, Perkin -Elmer people, from top management researchers and engineers are both technically and bottom-line, or profit, oriented.

other federal requirements.

Opponents of Southern California Edison's San society should assume the Onofre nuclear plant are watching the Diablo Canyon proceedings with interest. Sources in the anti - nuclear movement say they are confident Herbert Brown will represent the governor when licensing hearings for two new power units at San Onofre begin next spring.

However, in a private conversation with a reporter last year, Gov. Brown said to "watch the Diablo Canyon proceedings carefully because San Onofre is next."

Caring for living Christmas trees

When planting a container-grown, living Christmas tree, pick a well-drained, partially shaded spot, says an adviser from the Agricultural Cooperative Extension of the University of California and San Bernardino County.

If the plant is to remain in its container, its requirements are similar to those of other houseplants. It needs air, light, moisture and a comfortable temperature. The roots should be kept moist. Miniature lights are best for living trees because they don't dry out the foliage. After the holidays the tree may be taken outside and sprayed with a fine mist from a garden hose to help it adjust from indoor to outdoor living.

L.A. Chamber Orchestra plays at Claremont

The Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra opens its second season in Claremont, Sunday in Garrison Theater, with Henryk Szeryng, violin soloist, performing Beethoven's Concerto in D. Gerard Schwarz, Music Director, will conduct the 2:31 p.m. concert, which will also feature Prokofiev's First Symphony (the Classical Symphony) and excerpts from Handel's Water Music Suites in F Major and D Major.

Kenneth G. Fiske, Professor Emeritus of Pomona College, will present a pre-concert lecture in Garrison Green Room, at 1:30 p.m. All ticket holders for the concert are invited to attend the lecture, which will focus on the works to be performed in the concert. The Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra Series is one of seven different series being presented by The Claremont College Center For The Performing Arts.

Henryk Szeryng, renowned violin virtuoso since 1937, has also recieved honors as a distinguished educator, diplomat and humanitarian. He annually appears with orchestras and in recital in the music centers of four con-

The LACO is now in its 12th year, and Gerard Schwarz is beginning his third season as music director of the 35-member orchestra. Schwarz currently is also music director of the "Y" Chamber Symphony and the Eliot Feld Ballet Orchestra in New York City, the Waterloo Music Festival in New Jersey, and The White Mountains Center for the Arts in New Hampshire. A member of the faculty of The Juilliard School, he also regularly conducts that institution's orchestras.

World and United States first performances are included in remaining programs of the LACO series, featuring Jean-Philippe Collard, piano soloist on Feb. 15; Yo-Yo Ma, cello soloist on Mar. 8; and Angel Romero, guitar soloist concluding the series on May 31 Season and single tickets are available at Bridges Box Office, Fourth and College Way, Claremont or by charge phone at 621-8032.

Bridges Auditorium, Claremont, will be the site of a special concert given by the Los Angeles Philharmonic on Thursday at 8:01 p.m.

A long time association between the Artist Course Series at Bridges Auditorium and the Philharmonic is being renewed with this fourth event in the 1980-81 Artist Course season.

When Bridges Auditorium opened its doors in 1931, the Philharmonic was a prominent part of the first season and continued to make an annual visit for many years. In 1975, Bridges Auditorium closed its doors for two years for renovation and the philharmonic played the final concert and then the reopening concert in 1977 following the renovation.

Carlo Maria Giulini makes his Claremont debut with the orchestra at the Dec. 4th concert, and will conduct the Brahms Symphony No.2 in D, composed in 1877, and William Schuman's Third Symphony, composed in 1941, and performed in honor of the composer's 70th birthday year. The program will open with the Overture to "I Vespri Siciliani" by Verdi.

The final concert in the 1980-81 Artist Course at Bridges Auditorium will be a recital by pianist, Peter Serkin, on April 23.

Camellias need acid soil and good drainage

Camellias are a California pioneer. They were blooming profusely in Sacramento in 1858 and since then have been planted and grown successfully throughout the entire state. The gardener wishing for the perfection of form and color that camellias offer should meet its certain basic requirements says the California Association of Nurserymen. The camellia should be planted in an acid soil with perfect drainage. Once this is done the gardener should check the following growing conditions of the plant and meet them constantly:

- Mulch with peat or compost spread about them to keep their roots cool and provide a steady supply of organic material.

Feed with fertilizers that will cause an acid reaction. Apply such food for growth in light applications as soon as new growth starts and again four months later and then once a month until

Water to keep the camellia plants moist based on the weather and soil conditions about which your nurseryman can tell you.

Psychiatrist says mental health depends on giving

By DARLA WELLES

Copley News Service

What it is, ultimately, that makes man human is his reaching out for involvements beyond himself. What it is that ultimately makes him happy is I aving those involvements. So says Dr. Viktor Frankl, Viennese psychiatrist, author and philosopher who at 75 has been involved in the study of the human condition and mental health for more He is the founder of a treatment movement called logotherapy, which is considered the third school of psychotherapy, after Freud and Adler. 'A human being is human only to the extent to which he is not concerned with himself but is concerned, instead, with something or someone other than himself,' says Frankl. "This may be work to do or another person to love, a cause to devote oneself to, another human being to lovingly dedicate oneself to.' It is in having those commitments, Frankl believes, that man finds meaning in his life and is able to experience happiness. Frankl evolved his theories of what produces psychological well-being during his three years in German concentration camps when he observed that those most apt to survive the incarceration and suffering were those who wanted to survive to be reunited with loved ones or those who had a sense of having work or causes they wanted to resume upon release.

The same has held true, he says, of prisoners taken in other military conflicts since that time.

Frankl considers man's search for meaning in his life the basic human motivation - the one that keeps him alive and makes being alive have value.

The man who has meaning in his life, Frankl says, is capable of suffering or even giving up his life when he sees a reason for it, as witnessed by political revolutions throughout history. But the man who has not found meaning, he says, is most likely to take his life, even Suicide rates, he points out, are high in countries that are socialist and have welfare states, which he says produce populations with "the means to live but who cannot see any meaning for living.

The focus on the material and the technical, he says, ignores the need for man to have meaning in his life and often frustrates his drive to find it. The quest for meaning, he says, is not a quest for an ultimate, universal meaning to span all mankind, but rather the search for each individual to find a meaning for his own existence.

Carl and Kitty Belsky will cue the rounds.

Logotherapy, as applied, he says, works on the theory that man has within himself the basic tools for dealing with fears, frustrations and dangers.

Included in those tools, he says, are man's inherent ability for self-transcendence (the reaching out), his sense of humor, and a strength - physical and emotional beyond that which most perceive themselves as

Those manifest, he says, in those instances in which people exhibit superhuman strength in attempts to save their own lives or the lives of others and in those instances in which people are the helpless victims of hopeless circumstances - such as the concentration camp prisoners or those facing death from incurable illnesses - who still manage to find meaning and happiness and give to others.

And they show, too, he said, in situations in which people are freed of their fears or obsessions by using self - transcendence and humor to see themselves and their problems in reasonable perspective.

Looking beyond self to sources of blessings

By The REV. MARVIN R. GANT Montclair Ministerial Association

Fall and winter seem a time of reflection, a time of counting, of evaluating how and what we have been doing. Maybe this comes out of the "harvest - time" idea; judging whether or not you have had a bumper crop or not, why, and what to do differently as we approach

And it is this process of re-examination that evokes gratitude in the hearts of many. What is gratitude? It is easier for us to describe it than to pinpoint the source of For it grows and matures out of a basic outlook on life, and many aspects of our culture today do not affirm such an understanding. When we feel grateful, we are looking beyond ourselves for the source of our blessings. So many images of life today hold up the illusion of the "self if we have made it in life, we have only ourselves to thank and that as such, there are no claims or restrictions on how we use our self - made affluence. Yet on second reflection there are very few who would claim that he/she has no one else to thank. There are parents, grandparents, and other relatives, brothers, sisters, education and teachers, a secure home, a faithful friend, and, today a wife / husband, children, friends, trusted associates. Maybe even difficult situations that pushed us toward perfection and called out the best in us. And the uncounted blessings which God has bestowed upon our lives. The list goes on, but when we take a moment, we don't seriously claim to be "self-made."

Yet it is the people who claim this status that are the selfish ones, who have no time for others, who feel no responsibility for anyone but No. 1. There is a time in life when all of us have thought that we were the center of the universe, and that everything revolved around our lives. As infants, this is the way we viewed the world, and we want our food, our pleasure or whatever NOW just when WE want it.

Gradually as we grow older, the focus of our lives changes, and we see that we live in a world with others and we need to accommodate their needs as well. And we begin to distinguish between needs and wants, and learn that everything we want does not equal everything we need. As teenagers, most of us wrestled with individual vs. family interests, and what it means to assume our rightful place and responsibility in the world.

For too many they never come to realize and act on the idea that what we have is indeed a Gift of God, that there are reasons for the gifts and implications for its use.

Gratitude is not a matter of quantity but of quality in one's life. Our ancestors came to America and knew terrible hardships, but were grateful. Is our attitude of the Life we lead one of discontent in general or of our own lives in particular. How grateful are we? How does our gratitute manifest itself? Can those with whom we live detect it? Can you be grateful to God for your blessings? Are we, with St. Paul, ready to put away "childish things" (I Cor. 13:11) and become mature in our faith and our responsibility with what God has

Sarah Edwards, right, as Minnie Povis, displays her former operatic talents while her sister Gert, played by Carolyn Griffith, disapproves in a scene from the UHS production of "Farewell, Farewell Eugene" opening Thursday.

UHS thespians give sentimental comedy

Upland High School's first drama production of the year, a sentimental comedy, will open Thursday. Written by John Vari with Rodney Ackland, "Farewell, Farewell Eugene," was originally presented in London and New York featuring the famous British comedienne, Margaret Rutherford.

The play is set in the basement apartment of Gert and Minnie Povis, the former quite correct and formidable, the latter not above sneaking a bottle of beer or reliving her brief but happy days as a member of a third-rate opera com-

The sisters supplement a small income by turning out hand-painted greeting cards, which cousin Peonie merchandises through her acquaintances in the "outside world. One of these is Chuck Bailey, who is in love with Peonie but out of favor with Gert. He does move a lot of greeting cards, however, which means more money for the growing fund in the 'Visit to Eugene Box.

Brother Eugene, by the way, has been off in Africa for a rather long time doing nobody knows what. All of this, of course, has its complications which run something like this: Gert manages to break up Peonie's romance; Peonie disappears; a baby is left on the doorstep; the authorities take the baby away despite the pleas of Minnie and Gert.

But then the pendulum swings back, and in the end each of the conflicts is resolved to provide a lovely Christmas Eve.

Featured in the UHS production will be Sarah Edwards as Minnie, Carolyn Griffith as Gert, Mary Borgia as Peonie, and Brian Hall as Chuck Bailey. Also included in the cast are Debie Ayers, Belen Caindec, Tim Dyar, Tammy Loveless, and Jamie Sessions. The production is being directed by Hardin Brothers, UHS drama director, with assistance from Karen Orman.

Performances are scheduled for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, Dec. 4, 5, and 6 and again on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 11 and 12 at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium, corner of San Antonio Avenue and Eleventh Street in Upland.

Imagination makes plain rooms spring to life

By BARBARA HARTUNG Copley News Service

Q. We have recently purchased a small home, 40 years old, which has badly marred walls and ceiling. The people who built the home were not professionals and so the

We love the location and the price and want to fix it up to be charming. However, we are a bit limited on funds. We don't want to undergo major remodeling but rather simply fix up items where needed. Our grown sons will help us with the work and they're pretty handy

Please suggest ideas for walls and ceiling. Would wood paneling be a good solution? Windows in the house are small so the rooms tend to be rather dark. - W.P.R.

A. You might be interested in a project by designer Shirley Regendahl where she transformed a rather ordinary room into a spectacularly cozy place. You might borrow some of her ideas.

She also had a room with small windows. To give a cheery atmosphere she decided on a red and white color scheme. She carpeted the floor in a dramatic red plush carpeting — excellent for covering any kind of patched up irregular floor.

She chose a delightful red and white print wall covering and fabric which matched. She covered the walls and the ceiling in the wall covering and added white beams to the ceiling and walls for some architectural detailing and to give a crisp look to the room.

Matching fabric was used on some upholstered furniture and on a skirted table, and plan fabrics on the sofas, which she had slip - covered for easy care (because she chose white for them). Matching fabric was used to fashion simple curtains for the windows. Woodwork and the fireplace were painted white. The overall effect of the room was very charming. Perhaps wall coverings would be a good solution in your home — both to cover the marred walls and ceiling and to add color and brightness to the room. The lively wall covering might add more personality and life to the room than wood paneling.

If you do choose wood paneling, select a type with a light finish and upholster or slip cover your furniture in bright fabrics to enliven your room.

Q. I have dark brown carpeting and off-white walls. We will be renting the house for about two years and we are not allowed to change the colors. What color draperies

I usually like to match draperies and walls as closely as possible, but somehow I feel off-white draperies and the walls are too much of a contrast with the dark brown

I prefer not to have print draperies, and I hope to be able to get something ready-made. I have a large picture window on one wall and a smaller one on the opposite. The larger one is rather private with a view of the ca-

I have a beige couch, one velvet terra cotta chair and one print chair with off-white background with print in shade of green and coral. My furniture is in a fruitwood

My favorite colors are shades of green, beige, coral and rust, - D.V.

A. A very simple idea might be to buy ready-made offwhite draperies to match the wall paint, and then add bands of green, beige, coral and rust in the lower section of the drapery. This can be very effective in repeating your room's color scheme.

You can either cut the draperies and set in the inserts of the fabric or you could simply applique the bands to the existing draperies. This latter way might be easiest. If some of your fabric from the print chair is still available, you could even do a band of that print, too. If you would prefer, rather than band the draperies horizontally, you can also use bands appliqued to the vertical edges of the draperies. Or you could band them both vertically and horizontally.

If you do not care for fabric bands, the same effect is sometimes created through the use of ready-made fringes or braid that can be purchased by the yard.

A colonial cottage is brightened by using red and white color schemes. This red and white print wall covering with mathcing fabric for draperies is combined with bright red carpeting and white ceiling and wall beams. Carpeting is Anso nylon by Galaxy. Design is by Shirely Regendahl.

Northern Californians hope to divide state in two

By EDWARD NICHOLS Copley News Service

Because of the hurdles embedded in the political system, any effort to divide California into two states is all but impossible. Yet if a group of Northern Californians has its way, voters will find a state splitting proposal on their June 1982 ballots, and therein

The northerners call themselves the "Two Californias Committee." Leon Pierce, a San Francisco businessman, is chairman and Douglas Carter, a former assemblyman from Stockton, is the de facto director of

Carter said the initiative petition being circulated "is mostly a mechanical device to get at the peripheral

The Legislature already has approved the peripheral canal, a 43 - mile - long proposed aqueduct in the Sacramento River delta that will roughly double the volume of Northern California water being shipped south and meter more carefully the freshwater introduced into the delta to repel saltwater pollution.

Pierce and Carter hope to veto the Legislature's decision by a vote in 1982.

And although the peripheral canal is the principal target of the Two Californias Committee, Carter also makes it clear that the group is serious about wanting to have one California north of the Tehachapi Mountains and another one south.

If the state - splitting initiative makes the ballot, it will continue a long tradition that extends back to the days when California was a Mexican territory

According to historians Warren A. Beck and David A. Williams, the north - south battle began in 1825 when the fifth governor of California, Don Jose Maria Escheandia, moved his office from Monterey, saying he couldn't stand the cold, foggy climate. Northerners formed an army and marched south to capture Don Jose. He defeated them in a battle at Santa Barbara and returned to San Diego. Joaquin Solis, the rebel leader, was

The battle of the Californias continued through the Mexican territorial years. In 1836 the capital returned to Monterey. It was moved to Los Angeles in 1845, but the treasury and customs stayed in Monterey

Politics in 1980 is more civilized. Since 1941 northerners have campaigned in the Legislature to split the state, always to no avail.

This year marks the beginning of the initiative route. What it all boils down to, says Carter "is who gets the water when the drought comes" - the farmers and environmentalists interested in protecting the delta, or "Los Angeles," Shell, Getty, Standard and real estate interests in the south.

And, he added, "Lots of people up here don't want to pick up the fiscal mess of Los Angeles. ... The Los Angeles fire and police pensions are in deep trouble." He discounts arguments that splitting the state will give each new jurisdiction less political influence. A split will give the California area two more senators, cut state bureaus in half and make government more responsive, Carter concludes.

His refrain is an old one. Except for an 81 - year haitus between 1859 and 1941, there have been numerous efforts to divide the state and the issues have become familiar. Always there's the water problem. There also were demographic shifts that tilted political power north or south, arguments over social policy and unresponsiveness of state government

In 1859 the issue that led to two California proposals was the slavery issue. Also, the north had the gold, silver, timber and votes and the south wanted out. Eventually, a bill by Andres Pico, a Los Angeles ranchero, passed the Legislature handily and was signed by Gov. John Weller.

Congress was afraid that it would comprimise the issue of whether new states should have slaves and killed

By 1941 it was the northerners who wanted to be divorced from the south. Population and political clout had shifted to the south and northerners were angry that the Legislature wasn't building the roads they wanted to move lumber and minerals to markets. U.S. entry into

World War II pushed the issue into oblivion. The record secession effort occurred in a five-year period beginning in 1965 when Sen. Richard Dolwig fought for a Northern California in each successive Legislature until 1970. The Redwood City Republican represented the forces angry over a 1964 U.S. Supreme Court decision which, in effect, required all legislative Houses to be based on population. The decision further diluted the political effectiveness of the sparsely settled

Dolwig got his bills through the Senate, but couldn't budge them out of Assembly committees

In 1967 Assemblyman Willie Brown of San Francisco tried a different approach. He introduced a bill that would have created a committee to study a split. "All they did was laugh," he reported at the time. Similar efforts continued through the decade of the

In 1972 Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, pushed for a West California consisting of the 13 coastal counties. The Legislature wasn't interested. In 1974 author Robin White of Mendocino sought a new state composed of the 13 rural counties north of latitude 39 degrees. Four years later Sen. Barry Keene, D-Elk Hills, navigated an 'Alta California' bill through the Senate, but couldn't find enough support in the Assembly Government Organization Committee.

And now the cudgel has been picked up by groups outside the Legislature who believe they can form a coalition of legislators, environmentalists, conservationists, fair-minded citizens and even the Los Angelenos "who paid for 30 percent of the water project and get only 2 percent of the water" (Carter's words).

It will be an uphill battle. Dividing California has never had much official or public support. When he was governor, the senior Edmund G. Brown didn't encourage a split state. He changed sides in a public statement in 1970 when he said a north-south California split would give citizens a more responsive government and a chance to streamline the bureaucracy. He repeated his support in a television program a few weeks ago in San Francisco.

Gov. Reagan opposed any division of the state.

He thought that the split would enlarge government, make Washington more dominant over California without really giving the north any economic benefits. Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has been quoted as saying, Who wants to be the governor of an itsy bitsy state?

Last week a Brown aide told The San Diego Union that the proposed initiative calling for a second California "is almost a joke around here.' Humor, as well as passion, has marbled debate over two Californias. Way back in 1825 many insisted that Don Jose didn't really mind the weather at Monterey - that he only wanted to be near Senorita Josepha Carillo at San In 1964 Columnist Arthur Hoppe of San Francisco offered his "Longitudinal Plan." He wanted to slice

California vertically into 40 senatorial districts. "this way," Hoppe declared, "every senator would have a district extending from the Mexican and Oregon borders and would therefore represent us nice Northern Californians as well as those awful Southern Californians. All our senators would be men of farreaching vision.

Carter, of the Two Californias Committee, says he was advised that he would have a better chance of success if he drafted his initiative to "give Sacramento and

Berkeley to Los Angeles. Bakersfield rooters have told Carter that they would give him their support if he proposed that Bakersfield be the northern state capital. "We've got the oil" they hinted. Some of his associates countered by saying they would accept the deal if Bakersfield also took the Los Humor leavens some of the hostility, but there is no doubt that the northerners feel very aggrieved and that their gripes are finding expression through an increasing tempo of activity in the Legislature and among the voters. Not the least of their problems is that all doors seem closed to them. The Legislature, dominated by the south, kills all attempts by the north to correct what the north considers inequities.

And at the present iime the public doesn't offer much hope for redress of any grievances. Mervin Field, California's respected public opinion analyst, said of the two-state idea: "There's very little supprot for it. Not more than 20-25 percent of the state's voters like the . It's too revolutionary.

Field said that in 1959, 75 percent of those polled disapproved secession of the north. By 1965 that figure dropped slightly to 73 percent. In 1969 he recorded 62 percent disapproval. Over the same period, he registered a slight gain, from 9 percent to 14 percent, for those approving two Californias.

The remainder of the respondents qualified answers or chose not to say Surprisingly, Field finds there isn't much difference in public opinion between Northern and Southern California. In 1969 Field said 64 percent of the southern citizens opposed two states. The comparable figure for the north is 58 percent.

People in both regions said nothing would be gained, a split state would lead to disunity, the move would be costly and that it would defy history and tradition.

It also would be very difficult legally. Article IV of the U.S. Constitution says "no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of another state, nor any state be formed by the junction of two or more states, or parts of states, without the consent of the legislature of the states concerned as well as of the Congress.

Despite popular books and movies about black holes, their existence is still just a theory, said Dr. Richard J. Harms of UC San Diego's Center for Astrophysics and Space Science. (CASS).

"I think black holes are a neat concept, but I've always been a little dubious about their existence,' Harms said. But, as a result of the experiment he carried out with UC Los Angeles astronomers, Harms now believes black holes "more likely than not" exist.

That might be the closest thing to certainty scientists will have about black holes. By definition, black holes can never be seen.

A black hole is created when a massive star burns up the last of its nuclear fuel and collapses inward upon itself. Its gravitational pull becomes so intense that nothing, not even light, can escape from its surface. It is invisible.

But theory says that a black hole can be detected if it is part of a binary star system, in which two stars revolve around each other. tremendous gravitational pull of the black hole would siphon off gases from its visible companion star. The gases rushing into the black hole would produce X-rays, the only visible marker of the black hole's presence. About 15 years ago astronomers detected one such powerful X-ray source in the constellation Cygnus in our own galaxy. They dubbed it Cygnus X-1, and it has come to be considered the most likely candidate for a black hole ever found. But not all scientists believe. There remained the possibility that Cygnus X-1 might just be a very faint star, its light obscured by the brightness of its com-

If you are looking for reasons why U.S. producstatistic: Government acalmost half of total U.S. that. economic output.

A new study by Chicago's Harris Bank indicates that what the government spends - plus what it forces others to spend now accounts, conservatively, for 44 percent of gross national product (GNP), or the nation's total annual output of goods and

The percentage grew sharply during the 1970s, when our productivity, or declined sharply.

"During the 1970s, our productivity growth was the weakest in our recorded history," Beryl Sprinkel, economist for Harris Bank, said in an interview. "Our standard living deteriorated. As the burden of government increased, productivity growth became progressively Government regulation will cost about $6 million this year - multiplied by $20, that would be $120 billion in regulatory costs. In total, the direct federal spending plus federally required spending account for 32 percent of the nation's economic otuput. That represents a shocking increase from the roughly 20 percent of the 1950s and local government spending add 12 percent - bringing the total to 44 percent this

But it is really more than that, said Sprinkel: "In our judgment, the estimates for business compliance expentivity is deteriorating alar- ditures ($120 billion) are exmingly, take a look at this tremely conservative. Recent evidence indicates the tivity now accounts for true cost may be twice
